ORA World website: Dr. Yan content brief, what we changed

Document followed: "ORA World Content Brief", from Dr. Yan's recorded conversation (3 pages, sections 1 to 9 and the note before publishing).
Website: ORA World v2 homepage (English), as built on 11 Nov 2026. Screenshots are taken from the live preview build.
Check run on the rendered page: 61 of 61 document instructions found in the right section; the owner's name, any "guaranteed" wording and any helicopter claim appear nowhere.

Note before publishing	Guarantee wording softened; items to confirm listed (last page)

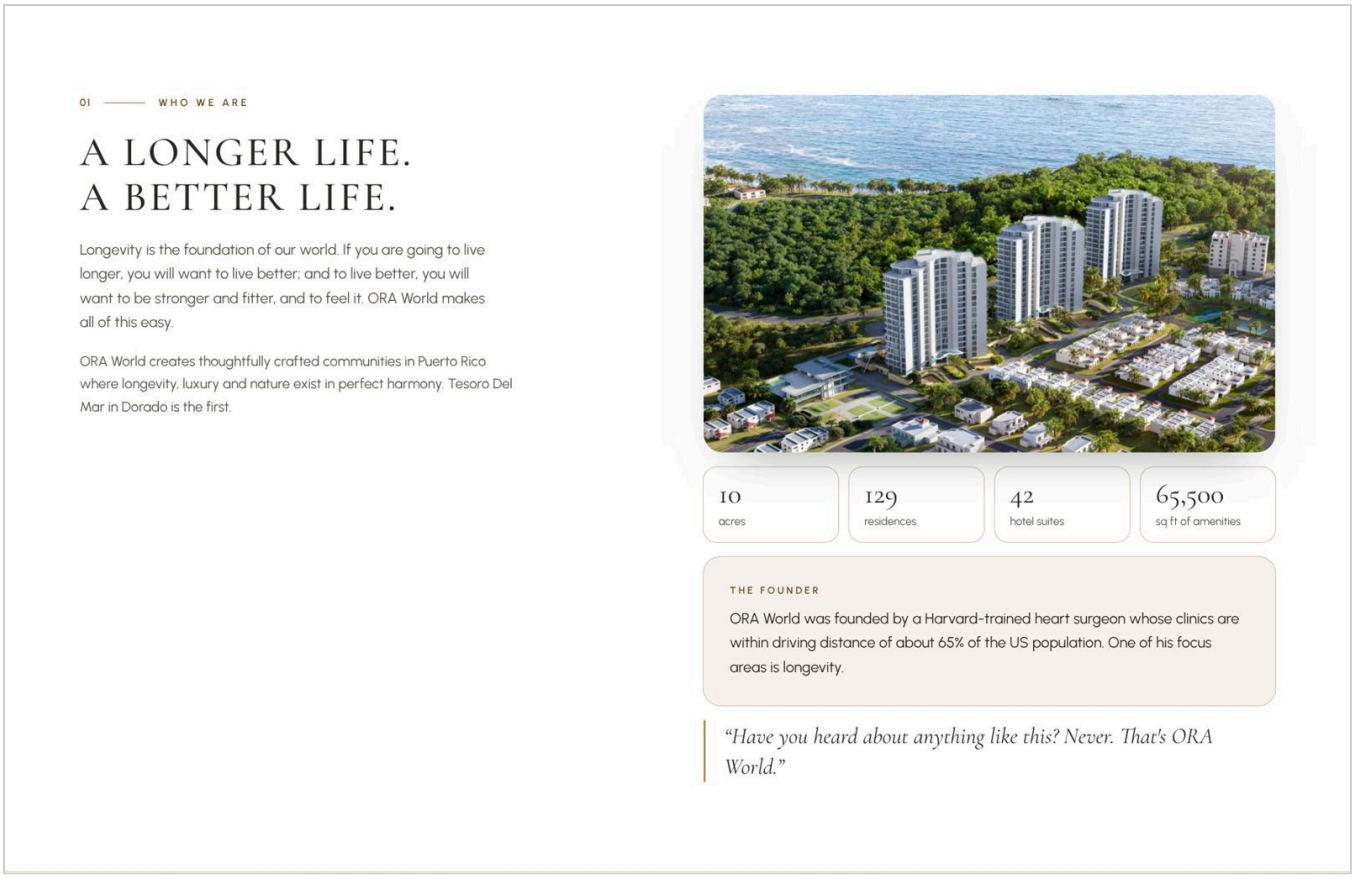

Doc §1 · The Core Promise → Website section 01 "Who we are"

What the document says

> "ORA World is about two things: a longer life and a better life."
>
> "Longevity is the foundation, the 'skeleton,' of ORA World." · "If you are going to live longer, you will want to live better." · "If you want a better life, you will want to be stronger and fitter, and to feel that way." · "ORA World makes all of this easy for the member."
>
> "Have you heard about anything like this? Never. That's ORA World."

What we changed and why

- Section title is now "A longer life. A better life.": the brief opens with this as the core promise, so the homepage opens its story with it.
- The intro follows his step-by-step chain: longevity is the foundation → live longer → live better → stronger and fitter → ORA World makes it easy.
- His line "Have you heard about anything like this? Never. That's ORA World." is shown as a quote.
- The founder card (§5) and the Tesoro Del Mar figures sit in the same section.

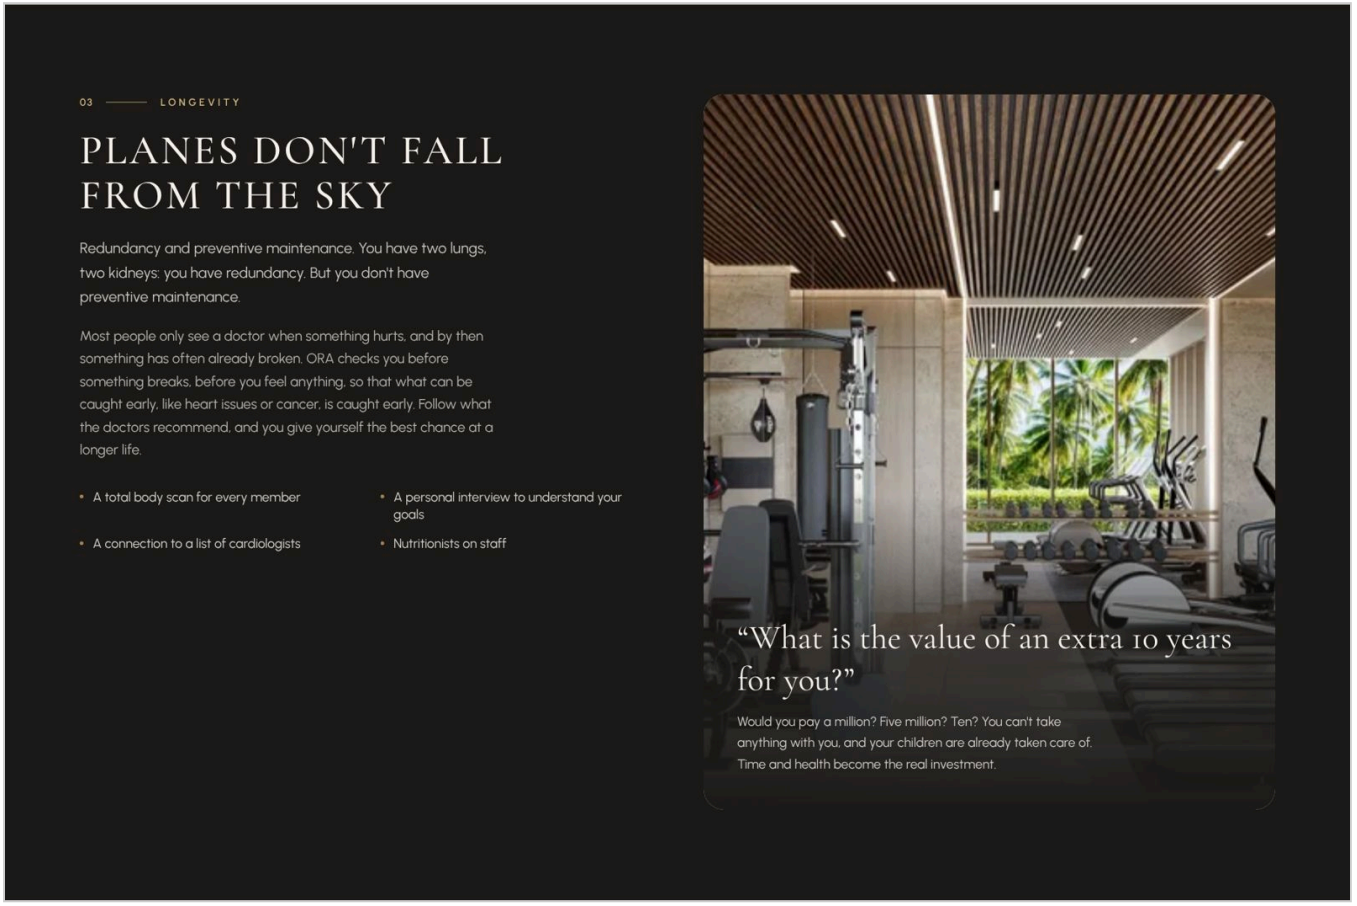

Doc §2 · Longevity and Preventive Health → Website section 03 "Longevity"

What the document says

> "Planes don't fall from the sky because of two things, redundancy and preventive maintenance. The human body has redundancy (two lungs, two kidneys) but no preventive maintenance. People only go to the doctor when something hurts, and by then it is often too late because things have already broken."
> "ORA checks you before something breaks, before you feel anything." · members don't die from things "that could have been caught early, like heart issues or cancer."
>
> "What is an extra 10 years of life worth to you? Would you pay a million? Five million? Ten? Wealthy people can't take anything with them, and their kids are already taken care of, so time and health become the real investment."

What we changed and why

- Section title is his analogy: "Planes don't fall from the sky", followed by the redundancy / two lungs, two kidneys explanation.
- The paragraph explains that people only go when it hurts, and that ORA checks you before something breaks so heart issues or cancer are caught early.
- His value question is the large quote on the image, with "a million? Five million? Ten?" and "time and health become the real investment".
- The bullets list the services that do the checking (§4): total body scan, personal interview, list of cardiologists, nutritionists.
- "A longer life is basically guaranteed" was softened to "you give yourself the best chance at a longer life", as the brief's note asks.

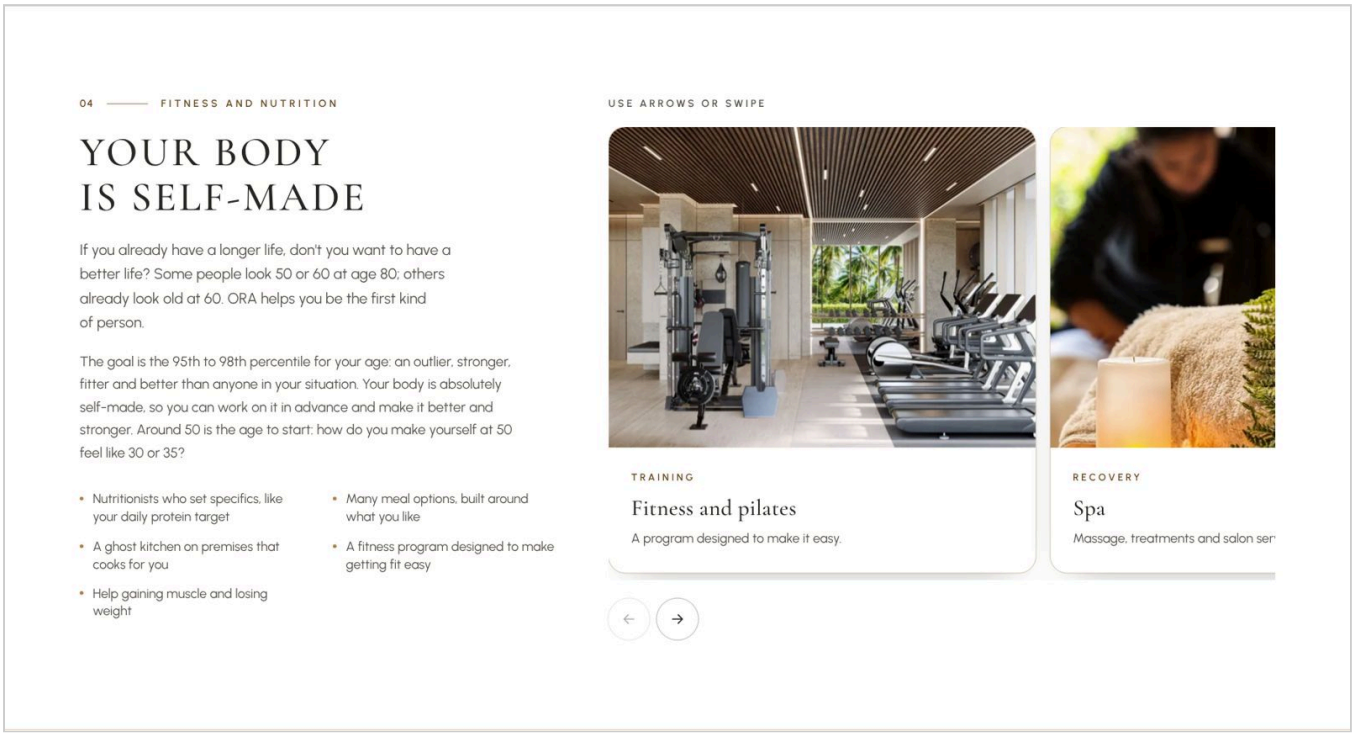

Doc §3 · Fitness, Nutrition and Aging Well → Website section 04 "Fitness and nutrition"

What the document says

> "Some people look like 50 or 60 at age 80. Others already look old at 60. ORA helps you be the first kind of person."
>
> "The goal for members is to reach the 95th to 98th percentile for their age: an outlier, stronger, fitter and better than anyone in their situation."
>
> "Your body is 'absolutely self-made,' so you can work on it in advance and make it better and stronger." · "How do you make yourself at 50 feel like 30 or 35?"
>
> "Help with gaining muscle, losing weight and proper nutrition, made easy, including cooking for the member."

What we changed and why

- New section, titled with his words: "Your body is self-made".
- Intro: "If you already have a longer life, don't you want to have a better life?" (§9 line) and the 50 / 60 / 80 comparison.
- Second paragraph: the 95th to 98th percentile, "an outlier", "work on it in advance and make it better and stronger", and how to feel at 50 like 30 or 35.
- Bullets: daily protein targets, many meal options, the ghost kitchen that cooks for you, an easy fitness program, help gaining muscle and losing weight.

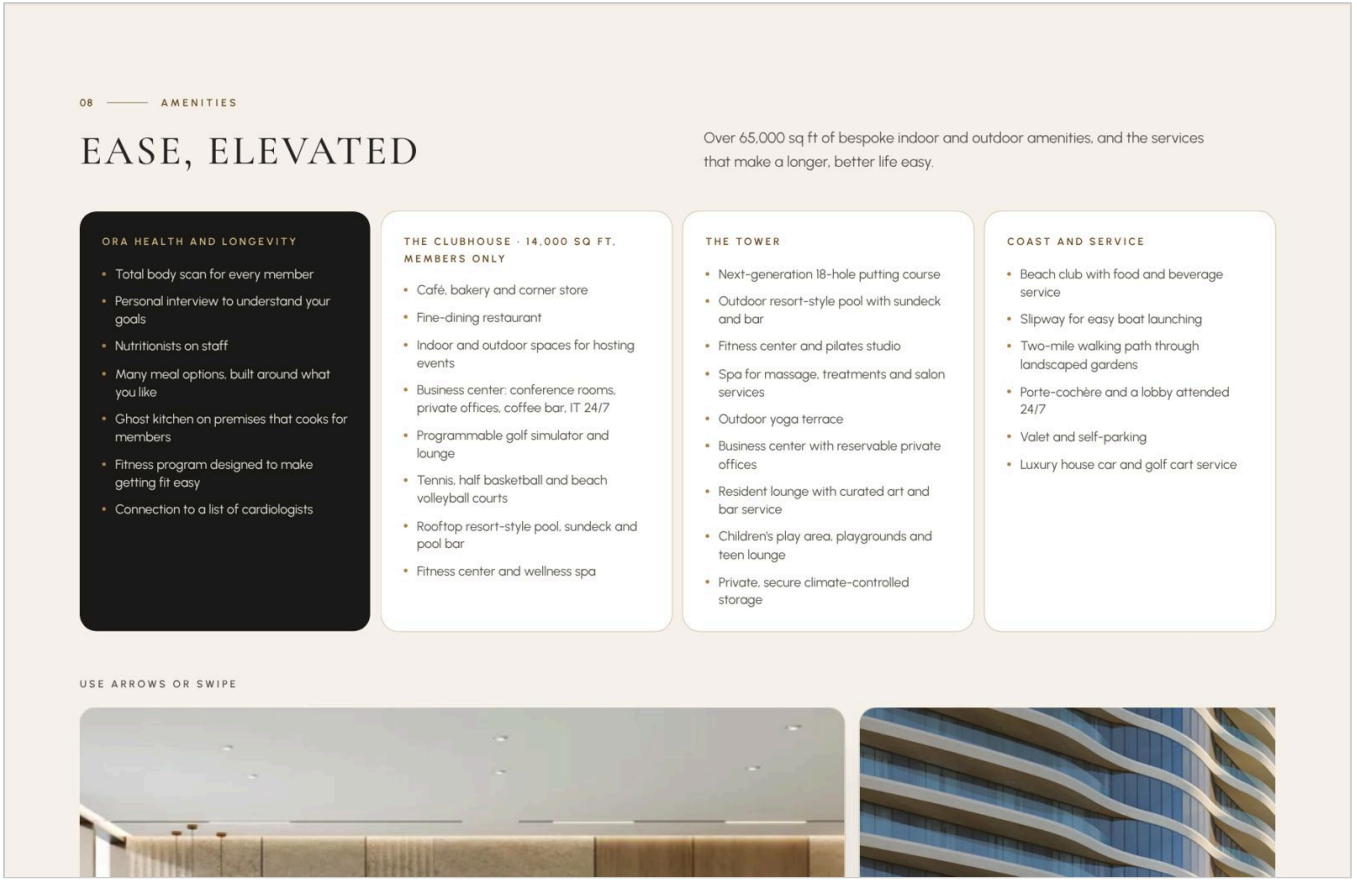

Doc §4 · Amenities and Services → Website section 08 "Amenities" (plus 03, 04 and the form)

What the document says

> Total body scan for every member · Personal interview to understand each person's goals · Nutritionists on staff who set specifics like daily protein targets · Many meal options based on what each person likes · Ghost kitchen on premises that can cook for members · Fitness program designed to make getting fit easy · Connection to a list of cardiologists.
> "He wants the ghost kitchen and the full list of amenities shown on the website."

What we changed and why

- The amenities section now shows the full list in four groups. The first, highlighted group is "ORA health and longevity" with all seven services, ghost kitchen included.
- The other three groups are the complete brochure amenity lists: the Clubhouse, the tower, coast and service.
- The services also appear where the story needs them: in section 03 (scan, interview, cardiologists, nutritionists) and section 04 (protein targets, meals, ghost kitchen, fitness program).
- "Personal interview to understand each person's goals": the inquiry form now asks "What matters most to you?" (see §7), so the first conversation starts from the person's goal.

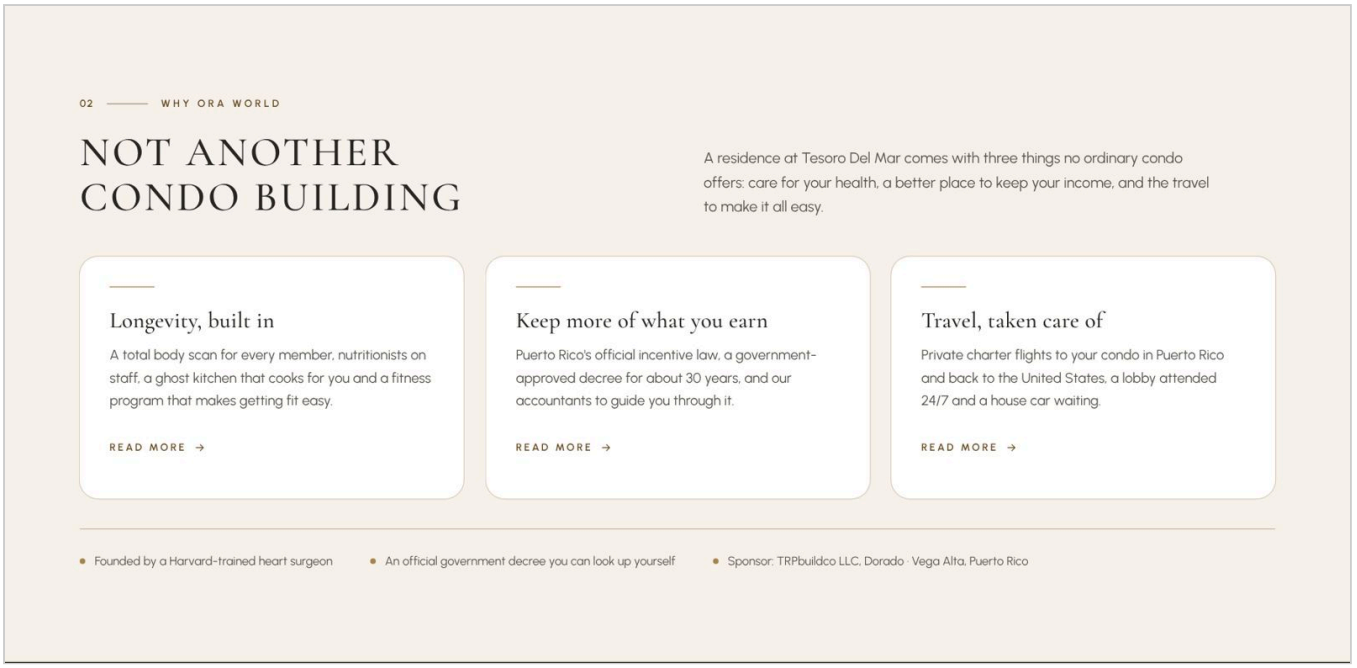

Doc §5 · The Founder → Website section 01 (founder card) and 02 "Why ORA World"

What the document says

> "The founder is a Harvard-trained heart surgeon." · "His clinics are within driving distance of about 65% of the US population." · "One of his focus areas is longevity."

What we changed and why

- A "The founder" card in section 01 (screenshot on the §1 page) carries all three facts.
- Section 02 "Why ORA World" repeats "Founded by a Harvard-trained heart surgeon" as a trust point: nobody knows ORA World yet, so the founder is the first reason to trust it.
- The founder is not named anywhere, as instructed.
- The credentials and the 65% figure are on the "to confirm" list, as the brief's note asks.

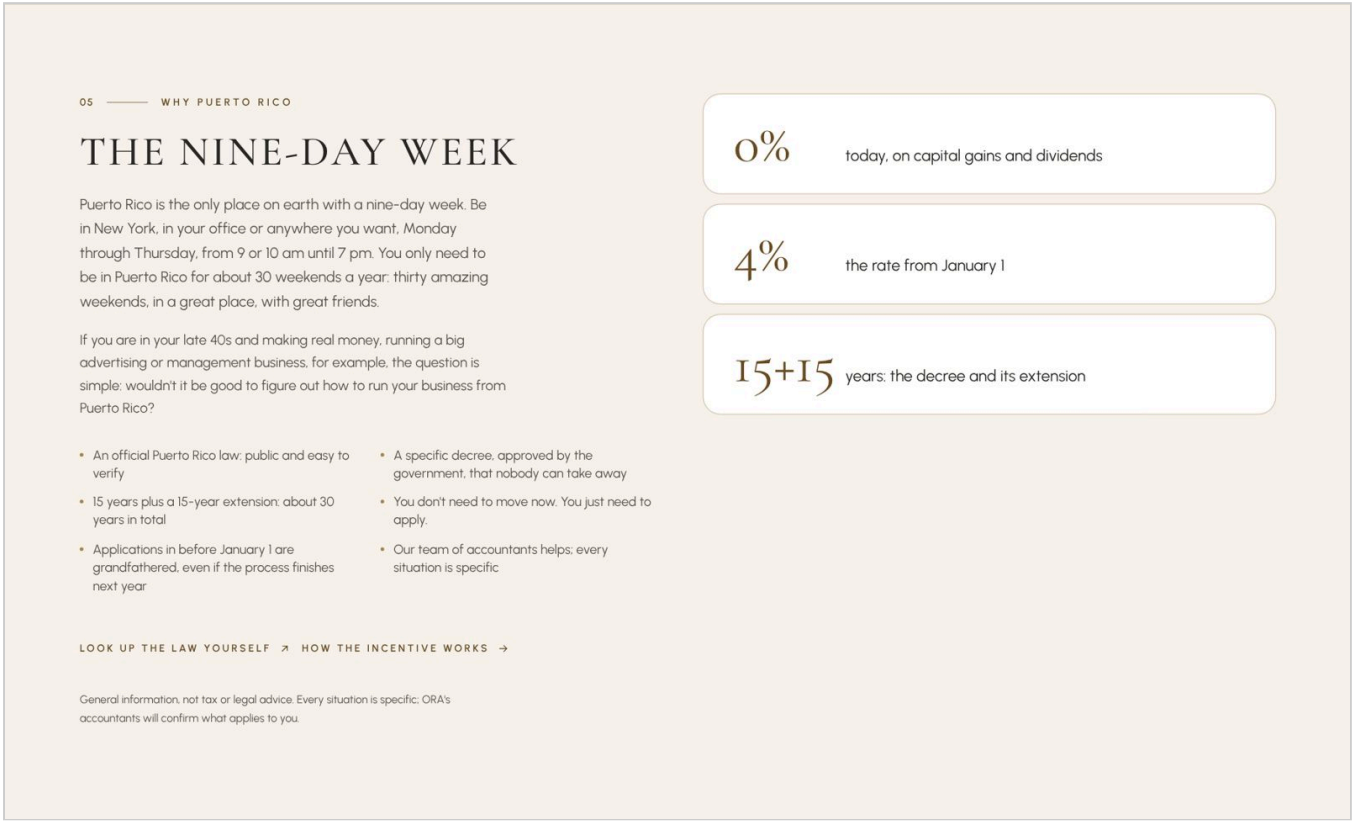

Doc §6 · Why Puerto Rico → Website section 05 "Why Puerto Rico"

What the document says

> "Puerto Rico is the only place on earth with a nine-day week. You can be in New York, in your office or anywhere you want, Monday through Thursday from 9 or 10 am until 7 pm. You only need to be in Puerto Rico for about 30 weekends a year, which means 30 amazing weekends in a great place with great friends."
>
> Tax: an official Puerto Rico law · a specific decree, approved by the government, that nobody can take away · 15 years plus a 15-year extension, about 30 years · "Starting January 1st, the rate is no longer zero. It will be 4%." · "You don't need to move now. You only need to apply." · grandfathered if the application is in by that date · a team of accountants; every situation is specific · everything is public and easy to verify.
>
> Trust point: prospects can look the law up themselves. Framing for high earners: late 40s, making real money (e.g. a big advertising or management business): "wouldn't it be good to figure out how to run your business from Puerto Rico?"

What we changed and why

- Section title: "The nine-day week". The intro has his full description, including the 9 or 10 am to 7 pm hours and the 30 weekends.
- The second paragraph is his high-earner framing, with the advertising or management business example.
- Bullets cover every tax point he made: official law, public and easy to verify; the decree nobody can take away; 15 + 15 years; "You don't need to move now. You just need to apply."; grandfathered before January 1; the accountants team.
- Three figure tiles: 0% today, 4% from January 1, 15 + 15 years.
- Trust point: a "Look up the law yourself" link to the government site (desarrollo.pr.gov).
- A short "general information, not tax or legal advice" line closes the section.

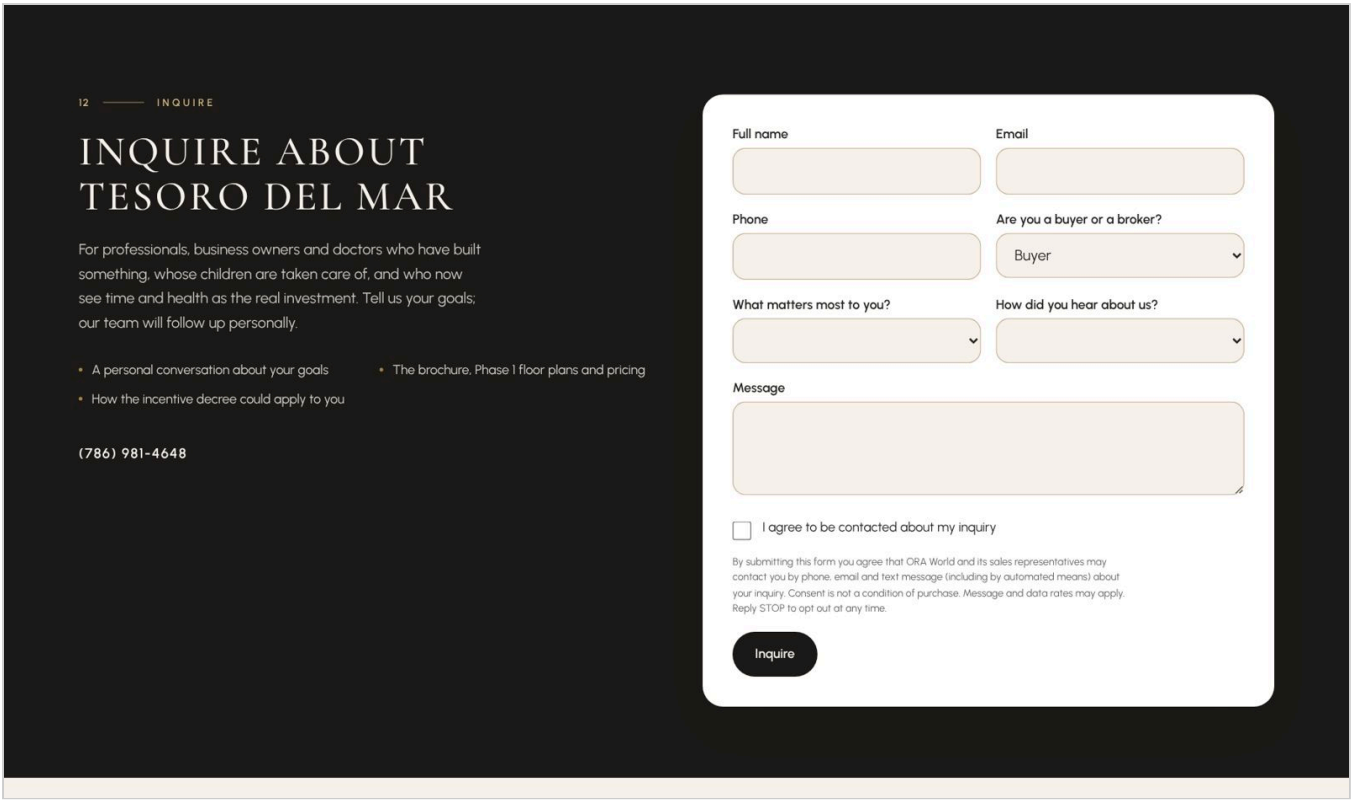

Doc §7 · Who He Is Talking To → Website section 12 "Inquire" (and 04)

What the document says

> Wealthy professionals and business owners, including doctors · People around 49 to 50 years old, the age he says people start thinking about health and aging · People whose kids are already taken care of.

What we changed and why

- The inquiry section speaks directly to this audience: "For professionals, business owners and doctors who have built something, whose children are taken care of, and who now see time and health as the real investment."
- The "around 50" age appears in section 04 ("Around 50 is the age to start").
- The form adds "What matters most to you?" (living longer, getting fitter, the tax incentives, a home for the nine-day week, all of the above). This is the personal interview from §4, and it feeds the call script from §8.

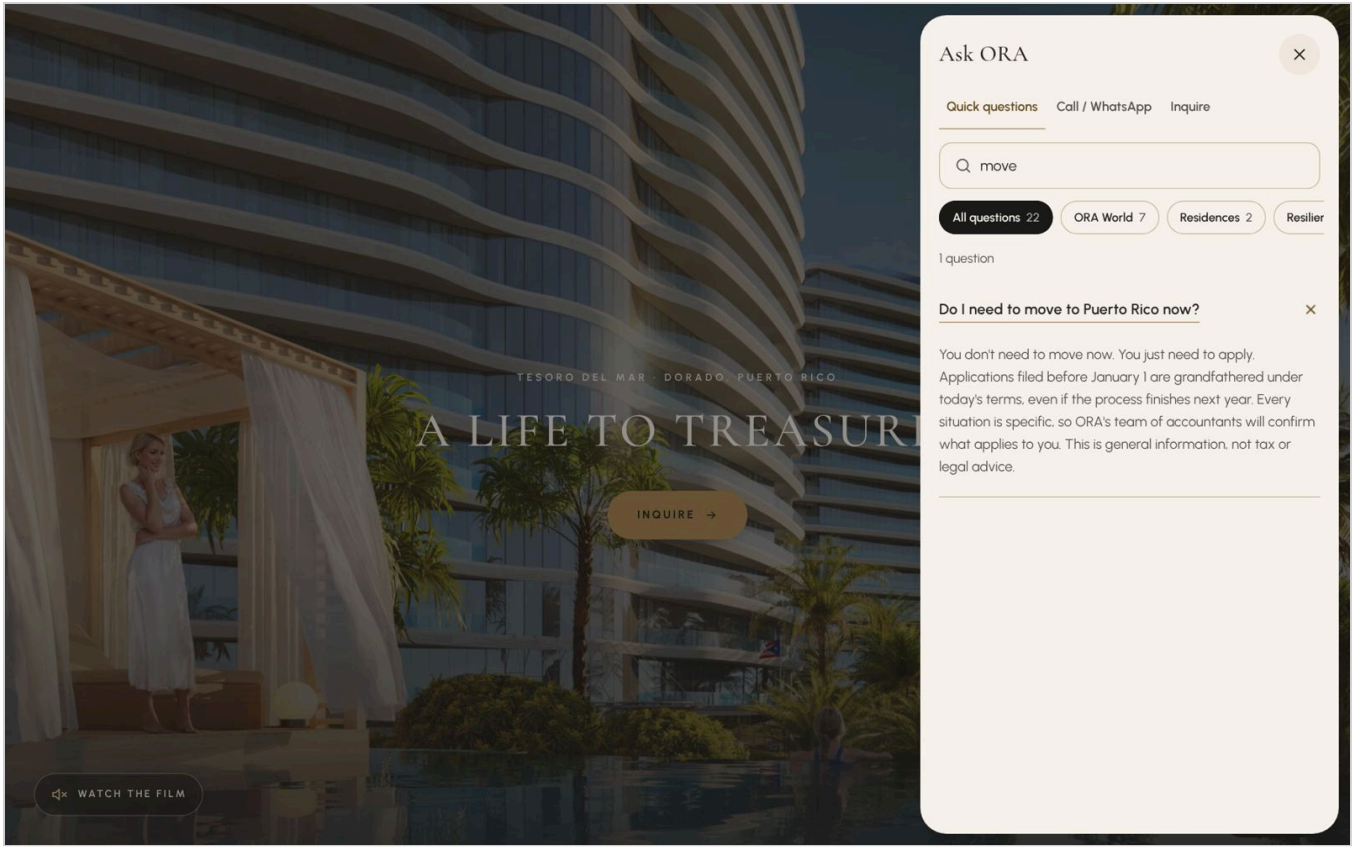

Doc §8 · Sales and Marketing Direction → Ask ORA, the inquiry form, the sales document

What the document says

> A CRM with a call script so every caller says the same thing · The system should know when a caller deviates from the script · 10 variations of the same message for outreach · Even better long term: AI that talks to the leads and gives them the right information every time.

What we changed and why

- Call script: written from his recording, in his order and words, in docs/sales/ORA-call-script-and-outreach.md. It is rehearsal-ready, since he plans to use it himself.
- Script checklist: 10 "must be said" points and 4 "never say" items. A call-recording tool can score every call against it to flag callers who deviate.
- 10 outreach variations of the same message (email, SMS, LinkedIn, follow-up), in the same document.
- AI that gives the right information every time: the website's Ask ORA assistant now answers in his wording on health, the ghost kitchen, the founder, the nine-day week, the decree and "Do I need to move now?" (screenshot below).
- CRM: the form's "What matters most to you?" answer is sent to the CRM with every inquiry. The CRM itself (script loading, call scoring, a lead bot) is set up in the client's CRM, not on the website; the document gives the set-up steps.

Doc §9 · Ready-to-Use Lines → used word for word

Line from the document	Where it is on the website
"Puerto Rico is the only place on earth with a nine-day week."	05 Why Puerto Rico (intro); Ask ORA
"Planes don't fall from the sky. Redundancy and preventive maintenance."	03 Longevity (title and first line)
"You have two lungs, two kidneys. You have redundancy. But you don't have preventive maintenance."	03 Longevity (intro)
"What is the value of an extra 10 years for you?"	03 Longevity (large quote)
"If you already have a longer life, don't you want to have a better life?"	04 Fitness and nutrition (intro)
"You don't need to move now. You just need to apply."	05 Why Puerto Rico (bullet); Ask ORA
"Longevity is the foundation of our world."	01 Who we are (first line)

Note before publishing → what we did

What the document says

> "Confirm the exact name of the tax law and the 4% change and deadline with ORA's tax team, verify the founder's credentials and the 65% figure, and soften any wording that promises a guaranteed health outcome."

What we did

- Softened: no health outcome is promised as guaranteed anywhere on the site.
- Listed for confirmation (in CONTENT-TODO.md, section 0) before the site goes public:
  - The name of the law: he said "Act 16" on the recording; the site and oraworld.com say Act 60.
  - The 4% rate from January 1, what it applies to, and the grandfathering for applications filed before then. The brochure says 0% on capital gains and dividends.
  - The decree term of 15 years plus a 15-year extension.
  - "About 30 weekends a year" against the 183-day residency rule shown on oraworld.com.
  - The founder's Harvard credential and the 65% figure.
- Other rules followed from the client call: the owner is never named, and there are no helicopter or pickup promises.
